

Gaining Access

October 15, 2017

To gain access all I can say is research and when doing your research be sure to use Law Dictionaries like Bouvier's and Black's to learn definitions of words. Legalize is important! Understanding words and phrases not only english words but latin words as well as well as words like including when used in definitions.

Research Birth Certificates and what they are, learn about Trusts and Bonds. Other suggestions to research are Universal Commercial Code, Treasury Direct Accounts, One People Public Trust, Colonel House and what he said to Woodrow Wilson regarding Birth Certificates and research Factualized Trust.

There is lots of information and research about the history and how these accounts came to be that I think is important. Also research things like the Factualized Trust and understanding what's in it ... this part isn't easy and requires a lot of time looking at definitions in legal dictionaries. I'm in the process of deciphering it myself so that I understand it and, if questioned, can give my interpretation of what is in it and not what anyone else may say. To have it parsed in your own words can demonstrate a couple things; first that you understand it and second that, in order to understand it, you are competent.

I'm in Canada our banking model is slightly different than the US. In Canada they use different terminology rather than routing numbers and we use the Bank of Canada, a division/department of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York which is a District of the Federal Reserve Bank. Every country that has an institution like the BoC it will most likely be an account under the FRBofNY. I was able to find the BoC had about 5 or 6 'routing numbers' within the FRBofNY. I also found that CANADA is a corporation traded on the NYSE.

In the US they use 'routing numbers associated with the number on the back of the Social Security Card, typically in red from what I understand, I worked in the US pre 9/11 and have a US SSN marked VALID ONLY WITH INS AUTHORIZATION and there is a number inked that starts with a letter. I don't know the year but older SSN cards don't have a number so people are ordering new ones. In the US banking system,s use 'routing numbers' for electronic transactions. These routing numbers are determined, from what I have seen, to the letter of the number on the back of the SSN card. From that letter you can determine the 'routing number' and your Account is your SSN.

Theses are supposedly working for people in the US but for others they won't work as you would need another number on top of those, something called a SWIFT number. Since that added another step and my US SSN has those words on it I stopped looking into doing things this way.

In Canada banks use different terminology and formats so I had to figure that out In Canada there is no 'routing number' and nothing came up on any searches. I thine looked at a personal cheque from my personal bank to see if it offered clues. I started searching, knowing the strip of numbers at the bottom of the cheque are MICR numbers, looking into things like that and found that the 'routing number' was broken down into Institution Number (Bank) and Transit Number (Branch). From there I was able to find two 'routing numbers' for the BoC. One of the transit numbers was nnnn1 and the other was nnnn6. Using logic I surmised that the nnnn1 was the fiscal year account to be used to file their Corporate Financial Reports to the FRB and the nnnn6 number was the accumulated account. I don't know how true that is but it made sense to me. I decided to use the nnnn6 transit number. BoC Inst # nn7. This transforms into the US 'routing number 0nn7nnnn6 from the information I've been able to find online.

I first went to my bank online to set up Bank to bank transfers. All information was accepted as correct, if you enter incorrect information it will immediately come up with Invalid. To finalize the setup I was asked to forward a VOID cheque. Since I can't I tried to order cheques and again all the information I entered was correct and accepted but these guys want either a VOID cheque or an MICR spec sheet to complete the setup. I has also found I was able to set up only two of my utility bills, cell and gas, for pre-authorized payments last month. Due to billing cycles those payments were scheduled for October 14th for my cell bill and October 17 for my gas bill.

Yesterday that payment was accepted by my cell company.

This is for educational and entertainment purposes only. I am not telling you what you should do except to research things for yourself.

Best Wishes!

Peace, Love, Understanding and as always In Honour.
